Fundraising Interns: 3 – 6 months, part-time

Opportunity for resourceful, ambitious, and enterprising graduates.

Contribute to an International Human Rights NGO while gaining valuable fundraising, communications and marketing experience and skills.

Ceasefire Centre for Civilian Rights is a new charity working to protect the rights of civilians in zones of armed conflict. We are now looking for two fundraising interns to help us to continue to develop and implement an unrestricted funding plan to support our work. One with specific IT, social media digital skills and one with broad-based marketing, organisation, and communications skills, for a time commitment of 3 – 6 months, part-time.

This is an excellent opportunity for someone who wants to explore their career options in the international charity sector, or as a step on the career ladder in a varied role involving fundraising, communications, marketing aspects, and advocacy aspects. Students due to graduate this summer are also welcome to apply.

The successful candidate will be able to:

- prioritise a varied workload and work accurately under pressure to meet deadlines;
- communicate positively with a wide range of people at all levels, including partners, funders, beneficiaries, colleagues, and the public;
- work as part of a team and independently.
- speak English as a first language or equivalent.
- be a fast learner, proactive, flexible;
- analytical, problem solving skills;
- Willingness to get involved.

These posts are unpaid, but a small daily allowance to cover travel and lunch is available. You will be working at our office near Whitehall, London SW1, with flexible working-from-home hours.

If you wish to apply, please send a CV, and short covering letter (no more than 1 side) stating why you are interested in this role, what you can offer and what you hope to gain from this internship. CVs without a covering letter will not be considered. Send your application to krishna.maharaj@ceasefire.org by Monday the 14th of August. Please put ‘Fundraising intern’ in the subject line. Applications will be considered on a rolling basis and therefore, we encourage you to apply as soon as possible.
About Ceasefire

Ceasefire Centre for Civilian Rights is an international initiative to develop civilian-led monitoring of violations of international humanitarian law or human rights; to secure accountability and reparation for those violations; and to develop the practice of civilian rights. Civilians are often recognized as the principal victims of war but rarely as the holders of rights.

We believe that supporting civilians to claim their rights and promoting their access to existing justice mechanisms, both nationally and internationally, are essential steps to holding perpetrators to account – and preventing future violations.

Our objectives are:
- to empower civilians in armed conflicts or failed state situations to monitor and document violations of their rights;
- to seek justice and accountability for violations of civilian rights; and
- to develop the practice of civilian rights protection and raise public support for the promotion of civilian rights.
Testimonials from previous interns

Bianca Pezzotti, Ceasefire’s Fundraising and Communications Intern.

Working at Ceasefire has been an invaluable experience for me. I have gained a deep understanding of working in an international organisation and acquired the necessary skills to succeed in the charity sector. I have had the opportunity to manage different fundraising initiatives, create promotional content for social media and email marketing and use lots of digital tools (such as Databases, Google Analytics, Mailchimp and much more).

However, above all, the internship has boosted my confidence. I now trust my working capabilities and am able to work independently. Whilst carrying out the internship, I was offered a marvellous job in another organisation. There is no doubt that it was all thanks to my experience at Ceasefire! Therefore, I highly recommend this internship to anyone who wants to start working in the non-profit sector. Whether you want to work in fundraising, communications, media or advocacy, this is exactly the kind of experience that is needed to complement a theoretical university education with practical skills.

Marnie Duke, Ceasefire’s Fundraising and Communications Intern.

This internship is very flexible and can therefore be useful for a range of different graduates. Whether you are interested in human rights, writing, design or IT, there is something in it for you.

I have gained an understanding of how to grow an organisation. This means learning how to build infrastructure in order increase your number of supporters. I have learnt how to develop a specific strategy for this purpose that can be referred back to throughout the process.

Additionally, I have gained skills in a number of online programmes such as ‘Canva’ which I have used to design the new website pages, a newsletter template, a flyer for the London Landmarks Half Marathon and social media posts. I have also learnt how to use ‘Mailchimp’ to release our newsletter and monitor its reception. I am also now familiar with using ‘Asana’ which allows you to create a work plan which both you and your colleagues can edit. As editor of the newsletter, I have carried out interviews and written a number of articles.

I have also learned how to engage with my colleagues professionally and chair a meeting. This has helped me to grow in confidence.
Testimonials from previous interns

Chantal San Antonio, Ceasefire’s Fundraising and Communications Intern.

Working for Ceasefire has been an opportunity that has enabled me to expand my knowledge on civilian rights and their liberties in the Middle East and North Africa while ameliorating my professional skills. During my time at Ceasefire, I worked as part of a group of interns, and we completed multiple fundraising activities that required strong interpersonal and collaborative skills such as the organisation of the London Landmarks Half Marathon event on behalf of the charity.

This internship provided me with the opportunity to develop strong technological abilities by analysing website data with Google Analytics, broadening my understanding of Microsoft Office and creating engaging digital content such as their monthly newsletter or social media posts with the help of Canva.

I also had the opportunity to partake in meetings and take action points, create digital advertisements to increase Ceasefire’s audience and I helped to conduct both interviews and inductions for new interns. This internship provided me with fundamental knowledge about fundraising & communications and it has given me an invaluable insight into the non-profit sector.

This experience has turned me into a more skilled young professional and has solidified my career aspirations that I would like to pursue in the future.
